SYNTHESEA

Hey everyone,

What a month it's been! Here's a quick run down.

Progress Updates

- Jay has left the team to focus on his studies. Best of luck to him!
- Applied for grants (Young Innovators Award, Better Futures)
- Got into the University Startup World Cup. Originally meant to be in Wenzhou China, but is now online
- Won 1st at Climate Launchpad's national finals! Climate Launchpad is the world's biggest green idea competition. Through their 3-day bootcamp and follow up sessions, we worked on our supply chain (flax & alternatives), new value propositions (long-term industry growth), and more
- We'll be progressing to the regional finals on the 10th of September- we'll post a link to the event when it's released ready for some slick new slides and a shiny new logo from them!

The lab situation is problematic, with uncertain restrictions and costs leaving no clear alternative. As it stands, the plan is to use funds from grants + competition winnings to get into a private lab.

Plans for September

- Applying for many, many more grants
- Preparing for Thought For Food's grand virtual event in October! They will be making a brief video intro for each team, which will be watched by 50,000 people. We're all in different countries and can't meet in person to film this- but we're still going to make it work!
- Market research exploring regulatory barriers of the industry, both in and out of Norway
- Making and finalising our lab protocols, and as always, some additional literature research. There's always more papers to read.

Our Ask

If you know videographers or someone with filming equipment in London, we'd be very grateful for a connection.

It's the last month of the summer holidays before uni starts up again, and we
